

The past and the future do not exist, is only the eternal presence

The passage of time is a projection of our reason. In this world, civilized people have divided their time and calendar to organize life for themselves and others. To know when to sow, who is old, when to pay taxes, when to go to church, when to work and when to go home.

In the multidimensional and invisible world in which our subconscious works, there is no past, no present, no future. In fact, it is only an absolute eternal presence, in which the past and the future coexist, at once, now and now. After death, there is only one presence, which is only one form of real being, that is, only now and now.

In the universe, everything is imagined: the past, present and future, each of them not only in reality, but also in all its possibilities and variants that have not or will not happen (see some people's ability to read in the past or in the future).

The universe records not only my destiny, but also all the specific details of my entire life, such as the road (all roads) to a crossroads that I did not follow and went to another destination. So if I go in any way, their course and goal and thus my whole life and my destiny are already recorded.

This presupposes the existence of a common consciousness of human beings (the global subconscious) in which all earthly events, deeds, lives, fates, paths, memories and all positive and negative deeds are recorded and from where the media draw information in a trance.

The distinction between past, present and future must be understood as an illusion (Albert Einstein)

The universe is not bounded by space and time. The future already exists in some way and can cast its shadow into the past. People, things and events leave their mark in time and space.

Without a doubt, man has the power to control time and space, or can use them. People are able to receive messages from tomorrow, or they can focus their perspective on the future or the past. It is possible to mobilize superhuman forces by simple exercises.

"Imagination is more important than knowledge. Knowledge is limited, while imagination surrounds the whole world, stimulates progress, gives birth to development." (Albert Einstein)

"Everyone knows that something is impossible, and then there is a fool who does not know that it is impossible and makes an invention." (Albert Einstein)

"Time is just an illusion," Albert Einstein said

The fact that time is relative and depends on the point of view is proven by the so-called "Jaluvka time tube":

On a transparent tube the length of time is written longitudinally from left to right, such as consecutive years, days or hours or the words past, present and future; this is the Earth's perception of time in 3D. When looking at the tube from the back, the time data is written backwards, so even the course of time is the opposite.

When looking at the tube from the side, there is a view through the tube defined by its walls and there is no progress over time, only the point where the tube walls converge, this point being the same when viewed from both sides of the tube and without any data about time.

The consideration of increasing the depth of time in the tube along its axis away from the viewing eye also makes no sense, as looking through the tube from both sides of the tube, the time passing on the tube and the increasing depth of time are always opposite and contradictory, which is still the same when viewed from both sides.

There is only an absolute eternal presence in which there are all variants of the possibility of all events in the past, present and future at the same time

This is evidenced by my findings and practical experience that, for example, I often feel (absurdly perceived) that the text I am writing at that moment I once wrote and now only see it internally (absurdly perceive) as a silver text written on a dark background and I just describe it quickly and without thinking. I'm describing what I'm writing.

Because the subconscious is not limited in time or space, with the emergence of any question (problem) arises immediately its answer (solution) and so no question or problem actually exist, because in the subconscious there are immediately answer and solution. Unanswered questions and unresolved issues are only in this world.
